

Chop

mod: 2345
design by Progetti C.R.

Made of solid wood, rectangular in shape with well-defined edges similar to the traditional chopping board but with an extra feature: a container that holds chopped food. A chopping board is something that is a must in every kitchen, practical and always at hand. Chop, designed by the Progetti Research Centre, is made of solid beechwood. It is similar to the traditional kitchen accessory but with an important additional feature: a container situated to one side of the board where food can be collected as it is chopped, thus leaving the surface free. The container is in stainless steel and can be easily extracted and used to hold food. Extra containers can be purchased and used to store various amounts of food. Chop is an item that simply combines design, tradition and practicality.
